

Getting the Most for Your Freight Dollar

A Solution for Securing Multiple Varieties in a Single Shipment WITHOUT Sacrificing Quality

For many small wineries and buying groups across the U.S., there seems to be an inability to source top quality wine grapes without the need to facilitate a series of deliveries for varieties that within one location are harvested at different times. When the total volume ordered by such a winery is less than a truckload (LTL), the need to further breakout the shipment across multiple trucks can prove to be prohibitive.

Above, Harvest in Paso Robles

In such a case, there is a solution. M&M's partner packing houses bring grapes in according to overall projections, acquiring grapes in volumes that mean cost savings to the individual winery. These packers have a reach across harvest areas allowing them to maintain a broad varietal cross-section, which in turn supports a single delivery of multiple varieties of grapes, must, or juice. Once more, as an M&M partner, these packers only pack grapes that meet M&M's expectations for quality and specifications.

 Reminder – While your purchase may not fill out a full truck load, the partial load orders of wineries like yourself across the country will fill out a load. Working with M&M Wine Grape Co. your refrigerated LTL challenges are not quite as challenging because we do the work to make it work and for as reasonable as is possible. With the money saved you can perhaps process another tank of wine...
